Foreword

Under Reorganization Plan #3 of 1970 the Environmental Protection Agency was established and assigned the responsibility of certifying water supply systems serving interstate carriers. This responsibility was formerly vested in the Public Health Service, Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare as authorized by Public Law 410 of the 78th Congress, Section 361 of the PHS Act as amended.

The interstate quarantine regulations, adopted under the authority of Section 361, are intended to control the transmission of communicable disease into this country or between the states. Part 72 of the IQR's contain the Standards for acceptable, safe drinking water systems and form the basis for the interstate carrier water supply certification program. Systems are certified annually by the Regional Administrators, EPA, based on data and recommendations submitted by the states. Systems in substantial compliance with the Standards are classified as approved; those with significant deviations from the quality, surveillance, facilities or operational requirements of the Standards are prohibited. A provisionally approved classification may be granted if it is judged that the deviations, although significant, do not pose an imminent and substantial danger to health. Whenever a system is prohibited, immediate notice is given to the Food and Drug Administration, which advises the various carriers that they may no longer take on water from the system in question.

In June of 1971 the EPA published "A Guide to the Interstate Carrier Water Supply Certification Program". This guide compiled various policies and procedures that had been developed over the years and provided a specific basis for classifications based on the degree of compliance with the water quality standards and bacteriological monitoring requirements. Five provisionally approved classifications were established to better define the nature of the deficiency.

Provisionally approved (Q) indicates that the water quality standards are violated

Provisionally approved (B) means that the bacteriological sampling requirements have not been met

Provisionally approved (F) indicates deficiencies in the facilities that reduce the dependability of the system

Provisionally approved (O) is used whenever there are significant deficiencies in the operation of the system

Provisionally approved (N) is used if the available bacteriological data are more than 18 months old.

Data on interstate carrier water supply systems are stored in a computer and a limited number of printouts of the systems and their status is prepared quarterly, primarily for headquarters and regional office use. Publication of the printout, for general distribution to interested organizations and individuals, was prepared in July of 1963 and August of 1966. This current publication consists of an inventory of all interstate carrier water supply systems for which the EPA regional offices have submitted a completed report form (EPA form 162) as of July 7, 1972.

Questions relating to the Interstate Carrier Water Supply Certification Program and this inventory should be directed to the appropriate Environmental Protection Agency Regional Office, listed inside the back cover, or to:
